WINNERS

Compiled by Michael R. Ebert

Robert J. McMahon
Nonprofit executive

Robert J. McMahon of Glen Cove is one of 10 individuals nationwide to receive a 2011 Lewis Hine Award for Service to Children and Youth by the National Child Labor Committee, based on his efforts "helping protect the rights and well-being of children and youth." McMahon recently retired after nearly four decades as executive director of SCO Family of Services, a Glen Cove-based nonprofit that provides shelter and various services to those in need. Under his leadership SCO has grown to serve more than 40,000 people annually at 122 tri-state area locations.

Jason Davidow
Assistant professor

Jason Davidow of Long Beach has received the 2010 Advancing Academic-Research Careers Award from the American Speech-Language Hearing Association based on his "academic and research endeavors in the field of communication sciences and disorders." Davidow is an assistant professor of speech-language-hearing sciences at Hofstra University in Hempstead and researches speech production changes during fluency-inducing conditions, which are speaking styles that temporarily eliminate stuttering. He is also a member of the National Stuttering Association.

Howard Fensterman
Managing partner

Howard Fensterman of Hewlett Harbor has been named "Man of the Year" by the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of America's Long Island Chapter based on his dedication and service to the nonprofit. Fensterman, a member of the foundation's board of trustees, is a founding member and managing partner of the Lake Success-based law firm Abrams, Fensterman, Fensterman, Eisman, Greenberg, Formato & Einiger LLP. He was also appointed to the Public Health and Healthy Planning Council by then-New York Gov. David A. Paterson.

Jack Sullivan
Volunteer

Jack Sullivan of Glen Head has received the Lifetime Achievement Award in Volunteerism from the Long Island Volunteer Center based on his efforts "helping to prepare people with disabilities for employment." Sullivan volunteers two days a week with Abilities, an Albertson-based nonprofit dedicated to helping people with disabilities integrate into the world of work. He previously worked as an executive at IBM, from which he retired in 1999, is a member of the American Legion and is involved with his local church.
