Leadership Above Partisanship: In his February 2025 Long Island Press Op-Ed, Abrams Fensterman, LLP Managing Partner Howard Fensterman supports Mayor Eric Adams' pragmatic approach to working with President Trump's administration.

Mr. Fensterman highlights the importance of prioritizing New Yorkers' needs, from addressing the migrant crisis to tackling transportation and public safety challenges, rather than succumbing to partisan criticism. As he writes, "The mayor is right, and doing his job, by committing to work with the President and his administration on issues where the federal government plays a large role."

MAYOR ADAMS IS RIGHT

Howard Fensterman is the Managing Editor of City Pulse.

It is the nature of political leadership that everything you do, or do not do, is subject to criticism and analysis that more often reflects the critics' biases than the target.

So it is with Mayor Eric Adams, who is receiving a torrent of criticism, mainly from the left side of the political spectrum, for reaching out to President Trump and his aides as the Democratic mayor faces a Republican administration that can help or hurt his city.
